Message from the Minister

From bringing a cup of tea to running a support group, Victoria’s volunteers help other people every single day, using their gifts of creativity, enthusiasm and compassion to make our world a better place.

This year’s Minister for Health Volunteer Awards recognise the inspiring work done by individuals and teams across the state. Our fantastic volunteers help make Victoria’s world-leading public healthcare system even better.

Our army of volunteers encompasses a wide range of people – professionals visiting the elderly after work, retirees running support groups, young people using their own illness experiences to raise awareness and first-aiders running response teams just to name a few. Their generous work, carried out in environments where people are often at their most vulnerable, shows us the best of human kindness in action.

Congratulations to all of this year’s finalists on your well-deserved recognition and thank you to every single one of Victoria’s healthcare volunteers. You’re a treasured part of Victoria’s health community.

Jenny Mikakos MP
Minister for Health
Minister for Ambulance Services
Introduction

Every day, in communities across the state, Victorians devote themselves to helping improve the lives of others. Within the public healthcare system, volunteers provide invaluable services to improve community health and wellbeing.

The Minister for Health Volunteer Awards provide an opportunity for us to recognise and honour the work done by our volunteers and its impacts. From groups sharing their experiences with mental health issues to help others navigate the health system, to those delivering exercise and strength training classes for older Victorians. From one volunteer giving up her lunch breaks to help transform radiation treatment into an empowering experience for children, to the many others who find creative ways to inform and inspire. From the knitters to the gardeners and therapy dogs, our volunteers represent the generosity and community spirit on display every day across Victoria’s healthcare system.

This showcase booklet acknowledges all our 2019 nominee volunteers who, through their efforts, have helped improve the quality of our health services and patients’ experiences, supported diversity and demonstrated innovative approaches to volunteering. We celebrate our young volunteers and those who have spent a lifetime supporting others.

As always, we honour the lifelong dedication of special volunteers who have spent more than 50 years contributing to their communities through the annual Honour Roll.

Jamilla McCoy

Very Special Kids

Very Special Kids (VSK) supports families caring for a child with a life-threatening condition. As a volunteer, Jamilla McCoy has been an incredible advocate for VSK through events and fundraising. She has made a significant impact in her work in the VSK Sibling Program, creating the Seeds for Siblings initiative. As part of the VSK Remembrance Day event in October 2018, Jamilla gave every family a handmade sunflower bag. Each bag contained sunflower seeds, a painted sunflower garden marker and planting instructions.

Families worked together to decorate pots and plant the seeds, taking them home to watch the flowers grow. When the flowers die off, the families can harvest the seeds and plant them again, creating a perpetual reminder of their lost sibling.

Jamilla’s commitment to supporting families after the death of their child is unique, particularly from someone so young. She has found a way to highlight sibling bereavement while encouraging children to connect with nature.

Jamilla supplies these gifts to nine hospitals and has so far provided more than 1,500 bags to bereaved children. Jamilla brings a sense of enthusiasm, joy and excitement to her work, balanced with thoughtfulness, empathy and an emotional intelligence well beyond her years.

Kaitlyn is normalising the experience of hair loss for young people affected by cancer and demonstrating how the challenges of a diagnosis can be supported and improved.

While still experiencing treatment-related hair loss herself, Kaitlyn appeared in a national advertisement without her wig, demonstrating her commitment and bravery.

Emma Finch
Link Health and Community

Emma Finch channels her own experiences of mental illness into supporting others on similar journeys. She has volunteered countless hours running art therapy sessions with people who would be unable to afford sessions at private or commercial rates. A talented artist in her own right, Emma has always been driven by a passion for nurturing the skills and talents of those around her.

Emma’s 30 years as a volunteer have included roles with Wesley Do Care, Amaroo Neighbourhood Centre, Link Health and Community and Bethlehem Hospital. Her students have included public housing tenants, children with intellectual disabilities, palliative care clients and local residents, supporting them to foster their creativity and explore what it means to live with anxiety and depression.

In 2015, after graduating from the Opening Doors community leadership program, Emma established The Black Dog Community Art Project, a series of art exhibitions that not only empower people living with mental illness to share their stories, but to create a broader, community-wide conversation about mental health.

Most recently, Emma has fostered partnerships with other community initiatives such as Grow and Kingston Creative Studios, lifting up even more people through art, as well as passing on her skills as an art therapist to future generations.

Peter Mac Radiation Therapy Mask Art
Peter MacCallum Cancer Centre and Koala Kids

Radiation therapist Renae Thorson initiated the Peter Mac Radiation Therapy Mask Painting team to transform kids’ radiation therapy masks into keepsake works of art. Radiotherapy masks are used to keep patients still during treatment. Once the kids have finished their course of treatment, Renae and volunteer artists from charity Koala Kids design and paint the masks according to the kids’ requests. Barry Hay from Peter Mac’s engineering department takes it a step further, designing and printing 3D objects to bring the masks to life, including unicorn horns and even elements that glow in the dark.

With funding from Koala Kids, there’s yet to be a request too difficult for the volunteers to turn their talents to. They’ve created some incredible works of art from super heroes to storybook characters. Renae works on the masks in her lunch break and after work, and Barry creates the 3D designs at home.

Photos of the masks are shared among patients and on social media, opening up the conversation about radiotherapy. Renae and her team are humble about their achievements, but it’s evident from the kids’ reactions that it’s these small things that make a huge difference to their treatment and recovery.

Chon Witherden
Barwon Health

For more than 10 years Chon Witherden has been supporting patients at the end of their lives, spending the past three years as a volunteer in the Barwon Health Palliative Care Unit.

Drawing on her own experiences, Chon personalises every interaction she has with patients. She intuitively taps into their needs, helping them to connect with the things they love – sitting quietly outside in a garden, listening to music or going on an outing of their choosing.

The palliative care team has come to rely on Chon and the amazing way she approaches her volunteer role. Although based in an inpatient setting, Chon regularly visits patients at home to meet special requests. These requests have included hand and foot massages, respite, gentle conversations about funeral planning and even haircuts.

Chon allows people to live and die with dignity. She has a way with words and a unique, honest way of changing a patient’s way of thinking about death from ‘end of life’ to ‘quality of life’.

She has a genuine warmth and empathetic soul that draws people in. Her ability to bring calm to what is often an anxious time inspires those around her.

Alan White

Peter MacCallum Cancer Centre

Alan White strives to improve the experience of men living with prostate cancer. As a prostate cancer survivor himself, Alan empathises with and empowers men living with the condition.

At Peter MacCallum Cancer Centre, Alan is actively involved in a National Health and Medical Research Council funded trial of an online treatment decision aid called NAVIGATE for men diagnosed with low-risk prostate cancer. As a named consumer-investigator on the grant, Alan has played a crucial role in this trial from its inception.

Alan also facilitates a support group for the Prostate Cancer Foundation of Australia and is a Men’s Health Peer Educator for the Department of Veterans’ Affairs. He is an active consumer advocate, presents at scientific conferences and consumer health forums, writes scholarly papers, prepares grant applications, has authored a book and writes a blog.

Alan combines the personal experiences of men with prostate cancer with his knowledge of the health system to improve outcomes for the men he works with. He helps them to process their diagnosis and to cope with the side effects of treatment. He is genuine, personable and, in his own words, ‘comfortable talking about the uncomfortable’.

The eight drivers are a committed group that allow community members access to specialists, cancer treatment and other appointments that are not available within the local area.

The drivers often have very long days, waiting for clients to finish cancer treatments and day surgery procedures. Some clients are wheelchair-bound, and drivers are happy to oblige extra requests such as stopping to fill scripts or taking clients for a coffee.

Listening to Voices Theatre
Gateway Health

Listening to Voices Theatre is an innovative Gateway Health project that is shifting community conversations about mental health towards optimism, hope and understanding.

Under the guidance of community development theatre director Catherine Simmonds, volunteer performers Ben, Kelly, Sarah, Jain and Chloe share their stories to help shift people’s mindsets from ‘what’s wrong with you’ to a greater understanding of ‘what’s happened to you’.

Since early 2016 the group, who have all had their own experiences with mental health issues, has presented more than 20 community, health and education specific performances across metropolitan and regional Victoria and New South Wales. More than 1,500 people have heard their stories live and many more through a short film they created about their work.

Despite the personal impact of this work on their own mental health at times, the troupe manage to balance tough topics with humour and energy. They are constantly shattering the stigma around mental illness, particularly psychosis and schizophrenia, and highlighting the impact of childhood trauma through raw and honest accounts that are at the same time hopeful and emphasise recovery.

They have presented to health services, professionals, community groups and students, and continue to impact people’s perceptions of mental health care.

Volunteer Doula Team
Birth for Humankind

In the past 12 months, the volunteers have provided more than 3,000 hours of one-to-one practical, emotional and personal support to approximately 100 clients. Much of this is labour support but often continues into early parenting, creating a lifetime of difference for families.

Outstanding Achievement by a Volunteer – Supporting diversity

With many clients presenting with histories of trauma, Janet is an unfailingly patient, kind and extremely thorough clinician.

Rod Patton
Cowes Ambulance Auxiliary

Rod Patton was a Cowes Ambulance Auxiliary member for 50 years, holding executive positions through several terms as president and vice president. He was also an active member of the CFA for more than 50 years, with multiple periods as captain and other brigade officer roles as well as being a group officer for many years. While volunteering he ran his own heavy equipment business as well as a sheep and beef farm.

Like all members of the auxiliary, the role called Rod away from his work and family at a moment’s notice to provide emergency medical response to the local community. Rod and his family are owed a great deal of gratitude for all they have done for Ambulance Victoria and the communities of Phillip Island and San Remo.

As part of the auxiliary, Rod helped raise funds for various items of equipment to support branch staff. Over the past two decades, auxiliary funds purchased $250,000 of equipment and training for the branch and local paramedics. The auxiliary also contributed $45,000 to better equip a CSO vehicle in the South Coast District.

Rod was nominated to be inducted onto the Honour Roll this year, sadly he passed away in the lead up to these awards. He showed true dedication and loyalty, not only to Ambulance Victoria, but to the entire community in Cowes and its surrounds.

We recognise his dedicated volunteering, he will be truly missed.
The Victorian Government proudly acknowledges Victoria’s Aboriginal communities and their rich culture and pays respect to their Elders past and present. We acknowledge Aboriginal people as Australia’s first peoples and as the Traditional Owners and custodians of the land and water on which we live, work and play. We recognise and value the ongoing contribution of Aboriginal people and communities to Victorian life and how this enriches our society more broadly. We embrace the spirit of self-determination and reconciliation, working towards equality of outcomes and ensuring an equitable voice.

Victorian Aboriginal communities and peoples are culturally diverse, with rich and varied heritages and histories both pre and post-invasion. The impacts of colonisation – while having devastating effects on the traditional life of Aboriginal Nations – have not diminished Aboriginal people’s connection to country, culture or community. Aboriginal Nations continue to strengthen and grow with the resurgence of language, lore and cultural knowledge. These rich and varied histories need to be understood and acknowledged by all Victorians, to truly understand the resilience and strength of previous generations, as well as the history of the fight for survival, justice and country that has taken place across Victoria and around Australia.

As we work together to ensure Victorian Aboriginal communities continue to thrive, the government acknowledges the invaluable contributions of generations of Aboriginal warriors that have come before us, who have fought tirelessly for the rights of their people and communities towards Aboriginal self-determination. We are now honoured to be part of that vision.
